This is an amazing book—the story of Ireland with every prominent British statesman woven into it, involving as well the names of the ex-Kaiser, Ludendorf, and Roger Casement. Shaw Desmond was in touch with the inner circles of the Republican movement, and his material is literally unique in quality.—Adv.

In all the wide range of children's stories there is nothing more fascinating than Washington Irving's Tales of the Alhambra. Here in a comparatively modern setting we have all of the intense romanticism of the Spanish race reflected in the legends of a vanished people, the Moors of Spain. Magic, mystery and enchantment, were the daily food of the Moor according to these tales passed down from generation to generation. A beautiful piece of bookmaking provides a worthy form for this masterpiece of Irving's. The illustrations, twelve splendid full page color plates and many pen and pencil drawings reflect the spirit of the fanciful themes.—Adv.

This volume stresses the fundamental principles of cooperative marketing among farmers. It recites typical instances of what is being accomplished in the handling of various farm commodities and discusses methods and forms of organization, incorporation, position under anti-trust laws and related questions. The author has written the book from his experience of a number of years with the Federal bureau of markets and state institutions. The business side of cooperative marketing has been especially emphasized.—Adv.

To women of the business world. D xii,255p $2 (8s 6d) '23 Lippincott 23-18091
Today there are more than nine million of women in industry. The author, whose business experience has extended over a number of years in various enterprises, knows the needs, the ambitions, the limitations and the capabilities of these women. Few days pass that one or more do not come to her or write asking for advice on how to start in business, how to become more efficient, etc. As the result she has prepared this book which is a series of intimate straight-from-the-heart talks to business women. It touches upon their manifold problems from the moment they enter the business arena until they achieve success in their chosen careers.—Adv.

Remembered yesterdays. O xxi,624p il $5 '23 Little [21s Allen & U.] 23-17557
This volume is primarily one of entertainment, for while it deals substantially with a life of activity in public affairs, events are seen through the eyes of one who, as a magazine editor, was long accustomed to address a popular audience. Picturesqueness and a prevailing sense of humor give buoyancy to the narrative of even the most serious happenings with which the author was connected.
Throughout his reminiscences Mr Johnson comments freely on customs, manners and people—not renouncing criticism but maintaining the attitude of an American proud of his country, and eager to see his countrymen realize their highest aspirations. The book contains some attractive and unusual illustrations.—Adv.

Croatan. D vii,298p $2 '23 Little [7s 6d T. Butterworth] 23-15821
In Croatan Mary Johnston has returned to the approximate period and scene of her earliest successes,—To have and to hold, Prisoners of hope and Audrey.
In Croatan she has woven her story about that band of English settlers sent by Sir Walter Raleigh from Plymouth in 1587 to settle in Virginia, under the governorship of John White. Their first settlement on Roanoke Island was destroyed by unfriendly Indians and they pushed back from the shore into the mountains, under the protection of the friendly Croatan tribe. Steadily more skilful has she become in catching spirit and intuition which brings them into harmony with modern thought so that they move as living, breathing people of today—instead of shadowy figures of the long ago. This book will appeal to all readers of Mary Johnston.—Adv.

In this book the author, an ensign in the U. S. navy, treats on the construction and operation of all types of Diesel engines. It thoroughly explains their construction, troubles, remedies, operation and adjustments, practical trials and tests and the elementary thermodynamics of the Diesel engine.
This book is not too technical for the practical operating engineer nor too elementary for the designer. It is an incomparable work of reference, every part and its function being described in a thoroughly practical manner. The book is fully illustrated with drawings of working parts and detail engravings.—Adv.

Democratic and internationalistic idealism is here subjected to a searching analysis, and is found wanting as a basis on which to rebuild a civilization torn and broken by the World war. The author would substitute a new sort of idealism, one based on the recognition of race and national consciousness, which he believes will make it possible for the white races to save the world by making permanent their domination. Psychology of education. S viii,232p $2 '24 Boni & Liveright [6s 6d Methuen] 24-9005
Kennedy-Fraser, M.A., B.Sc., is a lecturer at Edinburgh University and Training center.
In a style that reminds the reader of William James, the author presents, in terms of the educator rather than in those of the pure psychologist, some of the recently developed phases of the psychology of education. The teacher without special training in these matters and the teacher in training can make immediate, profitable application of the principles developed. Especially valuable for the teacher who would keep abreast of recent developments are the chapters which deal with intelligence and its measurement and intelligence tests and classification.—Adv.

This work is arranged in question and answer form; it is intended as a guide and text-book for the younger inexperienced fitter and as a reference book for all fitters. It has just been revised and enlarged and the author has illustrated and described many new heating systems and methods. Many of the numerous illustrations are made from original drawings specially prepared for this book. This is the standard question and answer examination book on steam and hot-water heating.—Adv.

Heroes; or, Greek fairy tales; il. by Howard Davie, and ed. by E. Vredenburg, abridged ed O 7-143p $2.50 McKay [6s R. Tuck]

The charm of this book is that of Charles Kingsley whose romantic spirit and delightful humor makes his children's tales as fascinating today as at any time in the three-quarters of a century since they first achieved renown. It presents favorites of Greek mythology that are particularly suitable for the young. There are five stories of Perseus, six of the Argonauts and four of Theseus. A beautiful piece of bookmaking provides a fit setting for this product of Kingsley's genius. The illustrations, twelve splendid full page color plates and many pen and pencil drawings all done with fidelity to the spirit of the subjects.—Adv.

History of music; tr. with a supplementary chapter on American music by Frederick Herman Martens. D x,397p $2.50 (10s 6d) '23 Scribner 23-13128
A one-volume condensation of the important phases in the development of music from its primitive stages through antiquity and the middle ages, which brings the subject up to the latest possible date by describing contemporary music in more than a dozen countries. Lives of the leading musicians of the past and present are briefly described, and their talents interpreted so clearly that anyone can understand their significance in musical development. A bibliography added to each chapter by the translator, with his supplementary chapter on American music, has increased the usefulness of the volume as a book for concise and authoritative reference.
The author is connected with the University of Paris.—Adv.

Bach McMaster, and notes upon the route. (Am. explorers ser.) 3v D 433;410;382p $4.50 '22 Allerton bk. A23-2054

A complete reprint of the standard edition of 1814. This expedition from the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean was the first governmental exploration of the great West, and it stands easily first and alone. This is our national epic of exploration, conceived by Thomas Jefferson, and wrought out by Lewis and Clark. The history of this undertaking is the personal narrative and official report of the first white men who crossed the continent between the British and Spanish possessions, and no traveler's tales have ever been told with greater fidelity and minuteness, or have more nearly achieved absolute accuracy. The route was from Illinois through regions since mapped as Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon; the Continental Divide being surmounted in three different places, many miles apart. The duration of the journey was from May, 1804, to August, 1806, and all communication with the world was suspended. This expedition was the glorious achievement that marked the beginning of all of the greatness of the West.—Adv.

Critical fable; Dear sir (or dear madam) who happen to glance at this title-page printed you'll see to enhance its æsthetic attraction, pray buy, if you're able, this excellent bargain: A critical fable; the book may be read in the light of a sequel to the Fable for critics a volume unequal (or hitherto so) for its quips and digressions on the poets of the day, without undue professions, I would say that this treatise is fully as light as the former, its judgments as certainly right as need be; a hodge-podge delivered primarily in the hope of instilling instruction so airily that readers may see, in the persons on view, a peripatetic, poetic Who's who; an account of the times, by a poker of fun. Voyages from Montreal through the continent of North America to the frozen and Pacific oceans in 1789 and 1793; with an account of the rise and state of the fur trade. (Am. explorers ser.) 2v D 355;360p $3 '22 Allerton bk. A23-2055
The author was the first white man to cross the Rocky mountains.
"The work of an undaunted and successful explorer. Mackenzie's expeditions were undertaken on behalf of the North West Fur company (which towards the close of the 18th century was attempting to break through the Hudson Bay company's monopoly), and were attended by many dangers from both nature and man. The main point of departure was Fort Chipewayan on Lake Athabasca—then called Lake of the Hills—whence he set out in 1789 for the Arctic sea, and in 1792 for the Pacific. In both cases he reached his goal, surmounting constant and most obstinate difficulties. In this region he was the pioneer among Europeans, and his book is a classic. Prefaced to the narrative of his own discoveries is a general history of the fur trade."—Prof. C. W. Colby, of McGill University.—Adv.

An American authority who has read the book said:
"The author is evidently a forceful thinker as well as one who is informed on library matters in general and county libraries in particular."
The book begins with the relation of the county library to organized education and emphasis is laid throughout on the educational possibilities of libraries in themselves and in co-operation with schools and other agencies. It takes a broad view of education and the place of reading in education.
The authorities cited are well chosen and in general give a correct impression of American practice. The three states (California, Indiana and Wisconsin) whose county library work is outlined are the best examples for illustration.—Adv.

Gehring, J: G: Hope of the variant. $2 '23 Scribner

The variant is that person who because of nervous or physical disorder, habits formed in childhood improper training, or any one of a hundred other causes, in some measure varies from what we call normal. The book is the fascinating account of the methods employed and results obtained by this famous doctor during thirty years spent in curing those whose variation was a real obstacle in life. His methods are those of suggestion and autosuggestion, education in optimism, etc., but with these he combines careful physical treatment of digestion and other sources from which nervous troubles so often spring.—Adv.

A plea in behalf of the forgotten man, Mr Corbin points out that economic discussion is based on an erroneous assumption that there are but two classes, capital and labor. The forgotten man, the brain worker, the salaried and professional man is only just being aroused to consciousness by the ever-increasing economic burdens which labor and capital have forced upon him.—Adv.
